The Lloyd's Register Foundation is a UK charity established in 2012 with a mission to protect the safety of life and property, and to advance transport and engineering education and research. It is the product of an organisation with a long tradition of public benefit, Lloyd's Register.

Lloyd's Register founded in 1760, is an independent risk management and safety assurance organisation, which sets standards of ship construction and maintenance, and provides technical inspection services to ensure these standards are met.

The Lloyd's Register Foundation Heritage & Education Centre library holds a full collection of the Lloyd's Register of Ships and related publications, which were published by Lloyd's Register until 1999 and then by Lloyd's Register-Fairplay, now IHS Fairplay.

General information on shipping and shipbuilding is available, as well as limited material and references to aid school projects on subjects such as the publication of the first Register of Ships in 1764. Marine casualty information dating from July 1890 is also available. For separate information sheets on the history of Lloyd's Register, Lloyd's Coffee House, the Titanic, classification and/or sources held in our library, please apply to the address above.

The Chamber of Shipping is the trade association for British shipowners and ship managers. Its key purpose is to provide companies with information on developments that could affect their ability to run their businesses and to promote their interests to Government and other relevant bodies in Britain and abroad. By providing a strong and united industry voice it is able to open doors which would otherwise remain shut to most individual companies and ensures that serious consideration is given at all levels to the views and policies it advances.

The Chamber is currently developing an education area on its website and in the meantime features a number of useful links.
